You've been here before.

The static is all-consuming, yet you continue to exist.

Your eyes fail you, a journey lay' ahead yet it's hidden from your view. You walk for ages, but you do not fall, your body can sense them.

Your eyes have failed. Their connection with your mind is severed. Voices call out to you. They're trapped here with you, millions.

You focus, and try to feel for your eyes. They scream louder, they scream for your attempt at departure.

Your eyes are closed, you struggle endlessly to open them, but they hold them closed.

"Stay here..."; They call out to you. You mustn't leave. They beg and plead. They will cease to exist should you leave here.

Their grasp is slipping. Light begins to seep in. They scream in horrifying pain. Their agony is everlasting.

You can still hear their screams, it has been eons, yet you hear them every time you close your eyes.
